THE COAL COLUMN

(By Rev. R. Upton, Publicity Section of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Committee)

Last week the coal committee extended itself to the organizing of Fernie, Michel and Coleman, the work being carried out by Messrs. O. A. Botter and Jack Brooks. A committee was set up in each place and they expressed a willingness to co-operate in a western movement to secure larger markets for our coal.

The northern coal fields will be next in line, including Canmore, Nordegg, Edmonton and the coal branch line from Edson. When this work is completed, a central provincial meeting will be held, and the policies framed for the big campaign of "Canadian Coal for Canadians."

The pressure of continued hardship caused in this area by restricted markets compels us to insist on a national policy for movement of western coal. In the east end of The Pass, although nearly one half of the year has gone, the mines have barely worked fifty days during the six months.

The history of the marketing of western coal shows that every advancement into new territory has been attained only by the active initiative of the industry itself. Much of this ground won for our markets is being threatened by eastern interests. At the present time active propaganda is being carried out at Fort William against the invasion of western coal into eastern territory. The federal member for this constituency has actually contacted the heads of the government for a reversal of the policy of paying subsidies to assist the movement of our coal east.

Criticism, prejudice and unfair business tactics will stand as a formidable foe to the displacement of American coal in the east. All these things were encountered when Alberta coal invaded Manitoba. Deputations approached the government. Some pro-

FRANK E. BLACHFORD

Distinguished Canadian violinist, well-known to both radio and concert audiences, who is to conduct the mid-summer examinations for the Toronto Conservatory of Music in Blaimore on June 28.

Mr. Blachford founded the Toronto String Quartet, which for many years was an outstanding organization in musical circles. He has long been a faculty member of the Toronto Conservatory of Music and is one of the leading violinists in the Toronto Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Sir Ernest MacMillan.

He phrased that if Alberta coal had to be used in Winnipeg, there would be deaths from asphyxiation and freezing. A professor stated, in all good faith, that if Alberta coal was used in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, almost every furnace would have to be scrapped; forgetting, of course, that the furnaces in use in the west were identical to the same as those used in Ontario and Manitoba.

The market in Manitoba stands assured today, and Alberta coal is satisfactory. This is a tribute to those who had the courage to pioneer in the establishing of a fuel area in Manitoba and Saskatchewan for western coal.

Our committee is rallying the support again for further effort of all citizens, as this is everybody's fight, not only to keep what we have, but to have preference in our own country's markets, so that our families can secure a sufficient income, commensurate to the needs of a proper standard of living.

NEWS FROM EDMONTON

(By C. H. Stout)

Edmonton, June 21.—Alberta's legislative assembly opened February 20th with the course apparently clear for a fast run and a government confidence in its overwhelming majority. The house prorogued June 17, very late at night, with the government majority shaken and divided, confidence gone and a period of grave doubt and uncertainty ahead.

Premier Abernethy and his cabinet survived after weathering numerous party storms; the budget calling for a tax levy of $18,945,928 was passed, the decks cleared for a long promised trial of social credit, but the so-called insurgents were openly pessimistic over the outcome and many in the huge government majority feel that another budget will bring about total collapse.

Hint of another session next fall when the social credit advisers of the government, C. F. Powell, L. D. Byrne and possibly Major Douglas himself, all of London, might have something really definite to show in the way of social credit, was thrown out by Mr. Abernethy in the house, another suggestion bluntly discounted by many of the members. They do not look for another meeting of the legislature until next February. In the meantime all received their $1000 over the 16 weeks' devolution to duty and were given the right to draw $4.00 advance on their next indemnity by special legislation introduced at the last minute by provincial treasurer Solon E. Low.

Combination of insurgent and opposition members cornered the government in the last party flare-up in the house Thursday and Premier Abernethy consented to the appointment of a royal commission of one supreme judge to investigate public works department methods on highway construction last year, with special reference to the Edmonton to Wetaskiwin and Edmonton to Jasper projects. Previously J. J. Bowen, Liberal house leader who for many weeks had persisted in asking for facts of this construction, was refused an inquiry in the public accounts committee.

Efforts were made by the government to have the probe postponed until the next session, but Premier Abernethy and Hon. W. A. Fallow urged the delay though insisting they were quite agreeable to an inquiry if the house so desired. Insurgents made it abundantly clear that they were not desirous of A. E. MacLellan, Innisfail, and Dr. H. W. Brown, Pembina, picked up a proposed Liberal resolution calling for a royal commission and submitted it as an amendment to the government's suggestion for inquiry into the next session.

Speaker threw the resolution out, his ruling was sustained by a 35 to 24 vote, and other members obviously were prepared to register against the government on the motion for delay, when the cabinet went into a huddle and Premier Fallow rose to move the amendment which Mr. MacLellan had been denied on the ground that it involved the expenditure of public money and therefore could only be introduced by a member of the cabinet. It carried unanimously, but Hon. Mr. Fallow seconded the motion with a queerly forced smile. Mr. Abernethy said the inquiry would be started as soon as possible, but many openly maintained that no judge would be named for the work until this fall.

JAMES CIZEK LAID TO REST

The remains of James Cizek, aged 36, who died in the local hospital on Friday morning following an illness of but seven days, were laid to rest in the Blaimore cemetery on Sunday afternoon. Mr. Anderson, of the Blaimore Funeral Home, was in charge of arrangements. Funeral was held from the home in Frank, and was very largely attended, including members of the miners' union.

Deceased was a miner, and had lived and worked in the Crow's Nest Pass for quite a number of years. He is survived by his mother, one brother, Charles, and two sisters.

Mr. Cizek was predeceased by his father, who several years ago was killed in a mine accident at the old Frank mine, and a brother, who was killed in an accident at Greenhill mine a few years ago. Besides his widowed mother, he leaves a brother, Charles, of Frank; and two sisters, Mrs. A. Sterba, of Bellevue, and Miss Annie at Frank.

The augmented Michel-Natal band headed the procession.

Also announced that transient relief would be cut off in the province at a date to be advertised. Total relief vote was $2,616,455 for the province, with another $2,806,000 to come from the Dominion government.

Adoption of the budget motion in the house Monday was preceded by an amendment from J. H. Tremblay, Liberal, Grandin, that the house had no further confidence in the government to administer supplies, at which 13 insurgents rebelled and left the chamber, thus avoiding the division. Eight other insurgents voted for the government, the amendment being lost 40 to 7, with James Hansen, Taber, independent social credit, voting with the opposition.

All in all it was a most amazing session, bewildering in its political complexities and a grave foreboding of what may happen if the government fails to work out an effective plan for meeting economic conditions and lightening the tax burden during the next few months.

SEES COLLAPSE OF FOREIGN POLICY OF GOVERNMENT

Kingston.—Preparations for defence and no commitments of any kind constitute a foreign policy which suits a very definite majority of the people of Canada—for the moment—in the opinion of John W. Dufour, editor of the Winnipeg Free Press. But the qualification, he says, is important.

He explained just how important it is before the second conference on Canadian-American affairs here in a paper on Canada's foreign policy.

The Dominion government's current policy, he said, was essentially one which kept national dignity at a minimum by postponing decisions and encouraging expectations. While it worked to-day "in a fashion," it was predicated on a continuance of existing international conditions.

If those conditions should take a violent turn for the worse—and he thought it inevitable in the not too distant future—that policy would collapse. The several present vaguely-defined groups of opinion on the question would then be reduced to two clear-cut factions, North Americans and Imperialists.

Of the latter group he commented, "In spite of much that I hear to the contrary I think they would together constitute a great multitude."

In the government's present policy, said Mr. Dufour, there was no outward evidence of an inward decision to take any particular course in the event of developments calling for action.

"The government marks time and hopes that nothing is going to happen," he said, "and the people do likewise."

There were parallels in this regard between the attitudes of the governments at London and Ottawa. The British government had rejected obligations beyond what it chose to regard as "vital interests."

"The Canadian government's only admitted vital interest is the defence of Canada," he continued. "Beyond that it will consider what it is prudent and necessary to do when decisions can no longer be deferred."

"This is rejection not only of league engagements but of any obligation, legal, moral, implied or advisable towards the Commonwealth of British Nations or any national member of the commonwealth."

"With what Malagracia very properly calls 'the quiescent war' erupting into violence which I cannot but think is inevitable at no distant date—the Canadian policy of preserving national unity by postponing decisions will collapse."

Valuable Timber Burned

Fires in Manitoba and Saskatchewan Destroy Hundreds of Acres.
Flin Flon, Man.—Forest fires in northern Manitoba and Saskatchewan have laid waste hundreds of acres of timberlands and caused many thousands of dollars damage during the past week. It is reported here.

South of Deep bay on Reindeer lake in northern Saskatchewan, 100 miles northwest of Flin Flon, it is estimated more than 1,000 acres of timber have been destroyed. Fire-fighters are encountering great difficulty because the blazes are scattered over thousands of square miles and a heavy rain is the only hope the fires will soon be extinguished.

Most of the fires are thought to have broken out soon after the snow left the ground, smouldering in muskeg for days and breaking out whenever timber was reached.

Fires are reported in the Churchill river basin 10 miles west of Island falls, on islands in Deschambault lake, 40 miles west of Island falls, and about 10 miles and 50 miles northwest of South Reindeer lake. Many smaller fires are burning in the territory.

Ocean Air Freight Service

Berlin.—The German Airways Corporation indicated it will not inaugurate regular air freight service to the United States until 1938. Chairman George von Stauss told company officials at Luft Hansa transatlantic trial flights would be resumed in August, and that regular service in 1938 is the goal.

Relief Costs Lower

Toronto.—A drop of $795,627 in Toronto relief expense for the first five months of the year compared with 1936 was reported by Welfare Commissioner A. W. Laver. Up to the end of May $3,914,420 was spent on relief.

Defence Tax

Britain Planning Five Per Cent Levy On Excess Profits

London.—The government offered a maximum five per cent. tax on excess profits as a substitute for its national defence contribution program which would have taken up to 25 per cent. of new profits in industry.

The national defence tax on profits, offered by Prime Minister Chamberlain when he was chancellor of the exchequer, was withdrawn from the government's budget bill after it had aroused a storm of opposition.

A government white paper outlined the substitute tax proposal, which would be imposed for a five-year period retroactive to April 1.

Business by British companies or individuals within or outside the United Kingdom would be affected. Public utilities and the professions are exempted.

The rate would be five per cent. for corporations and four per cent. for individuals on profits exceeding £250,000 annually.

The taxpayer whose profits are less than £12,000 is entitled to make a further deduction for arriving at a tax base of 1/4th of the difference between his actual profits and £12,000.

(A corporation with £4,000 income would deduct 1/4th the difference between that amount and £12,000, which would be £1,600 plus the £2,000 flat exemption allowed and pay five per cent. on the remaining £400. A corporation with income of £6,000 would pay five per cent. on £2,800, with £8,000 five per cent. on £5,200.)

Investment income generally will not be included, and tax assessments will allow for depreciation in industries. Interest on borrowed money may be deducted.

The tax is expected to yield £24,700,000 (almost $123,500,000) a year, approximately the amount originally estimated from the growth of profits tax, or national defence contribution.

Italian Ship Damaged

Spanish Planes Drop 30 Bombs In Vicinity Of Vessel

Gibraltar.—The Italian vessel Maeda put in here bearing the marks of machine gun bullets that came, her captain said, from two Spanish government planes.

Captain Simone said the two planes dropped 30 bombs which his ship was off Gran, Algeria, then swooped down low and machine-gunned the Maeda.

He reported there were no casualties, but said the Maeda was damaged badly. Scores of bullet marks could be seen on the vessel.

Lloyds' Gibraltar agent reported to London the Maeda was damaged by concussion from the bombs and said the ship was not hit by them.)

Satisfaction Demanded

Tension Between Germany And Czechoslovakia Is Reported

Berlin.—Tension between Germany and Czechoslovakia flared over a charge a German had been brutally treated by police in Praha. The press launched an extremely violent campaign around the incident.

The charge, made by the official German News Agency, was that one Bruno Weigel, arrested and released in Praha several weeks ago, had been subjected to physical indignities. The Lokal Anzeiger said satisfaction would be demanded "in vigorous and unequivocal terms."

May Extend Marketing

Party Has Left For England To Investigate Possibilities

Ottawa.—Several officials of the Dominion department of agriculture have left for England to investigate possibilities of extending the marketing of Canadian farm products in the British Isles. The mission will take about two months.

A. M. Shary, director of the department's marketing services; J. F. Singleton, dairy and cold storage commissioner, and other representatives of the department are included in the party.

Farm Labor Shortage In East

Ottawa, Ont.—Shortage of farm labor in the district is becoming acute, employment bureau officials said, with the demand by farmers for experienced help having increased sharply in the last 10 days. The average wage is $25 a month.

Low Fire Losses

Ottawa.—Canada has industrialized countries in keeping fire losses down. E. T. B. Pennefather, vice-president of the Dominion Fire Prevention Association, said in addressing the association's annual convention here.

Regard For Beauty

Should Cultivate The Aesthetic As Well As Utilitarian In Building Bridges

Montreal.—Lord Tweedsmuir called on Canadian engineers to aim their efforts at the aesthetic as well as the utilitarian in building "the material background of a great nation."

Canada's governor-general addressed a banquet of the engineering institute of Canada, celebrating its semi-centennial in a four-day gathering. He spoke to more than 500 engineers from Canada and envoys from a half dozen other nations.

An honorary life member of the institute, the viceroy said: "Even in Canada where you are dealing with nature in its wildest form, the engineer should also be something of the artist."

There should be "conscious artistic purpose" particularly in bridges, Lord Tweedsmuir said. They should be "adequate to the grandeur of the natural setting."

"Remember," he cautioned, "that this Dominion of ours is destined to be the playground of North America, and that those who visit us will demand beauty as well as usefulness."

NEED EXCHANGE OF KNOWLEDGE ON CLIMATIC DATA

Kingston, Ont.—Only by the constant exchange of scientific data and observations between Canada and the United States can meteorologists understand the climatic distribution and climatic disturbances of either, the second conference on Canadian-American affairs was told.

Since the physical condition of the continent ignored political boundaries, meteorologists also had to ignore them, C. W. Thornthwaite of the United States department of agriculture, contended. There should be an even greater exchange of knowledge and experience in this regard than there is at present, he urged.

From continent-wide study of the upper air, it was possible to analyze movements of climate from so-called source regions, he said.

It was possible, too, to analyze in advance such climatic hazards as had been demonstrated in the spread of the drought areas on the western plains.

In the last decade new methods of analysis of climatic hazards have been developed," said Mr. Thornthwaite, who is head of the section of climatic and physiographic research, soil conservation service, of the department.

"It is evident that if these methods were utilized to point out the areas of excessive hazard much costly experimentation and human misery could be avoided."

"In the settlement of the great plains the climatic hazards were ignored and at present a condition has been reached where large numbers must either be evacuated or must endure permanent and growing poverty or be permanently uprooted."

"Much saving could be effected if settlement in the Canadian zones of excessive climatic risk could be handled more intelligently."

To Salvage Cattle

Government Will Continue Assistance In Moving Livestock

Ottawa.—The government's cooperative agreement with the western provinces for salvaging cattle and lambs in the drought-stricken areas will continue until the end of August, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, announced.

Lack of rain and poor crops rendered it necessary for the government to continue the assistance by which some 30,000 cattle and 40,000 lambs were removed from the prairies to pastures in eastern Canada in the past year, Mr. Gardiner said. Provision was made in the estimates to cover the period to the end of April but additional assistance would have to be given this summer.

Plans for establishment of central pasturage in the prairie provinces, as outlined in the House of Commons last session, could not be carried out in time to meet this summer's needs, the minister said. Fodder will have to be shipped in for milking cows and assistance given in the transportation of other stock to eastern pastures.

To Manufacture Poultry Food

Japanese Professor Announces Plans For Factories In Canada

Regina.—Possible establishment of a factory here for manufacture of a secret new poultry mash was announced at Lake Louise, Alta., by Professor Ito of Japan.

The mash, according to Professor Ito, contains vitamins A, B, D and F. He has recently completed plans with a western concern for construction of five factories at Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Vancouver for the manufacture of this product. Besides serving the Canadian market, he expects to have it distributed in the United States, England and Denmark.

No. 1 Canadian wheat is the basic ingredient of Professor Ito's new mash. It contains many previously unknown products as well, and the secret of its manufacture is vested in a highly peculiar grinder capable of reducing a malleable substance to powder. The new chicken food is expected to be in use in Canada before the end of the year.

Imperial Airways

British Ship Completes First Flight From Bermuda To New York

New York.—Dropping from a cloudless sky to the water of Manhattan bay, Long Island, Imperial Airways flying boat, Capt. Cavell completed the first regular passenger-and-mail flight between New York and Bermuda.

Taxiing in like a sleek silver whale to the landing stage, the British airliner completed the first link in the chain of Imperial Airways air routes to touch American soil.

Taking off from Darrell's Island air base, Bermuda, at 7:30 a.m. M.S.T. the four-engined ship flew the 773 miles in five hours, 35 minutes, despite a sightseeing detour over Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Plans Are Checked

Toronto Cannot Vote Sufficient Amount For Two Airports

Toronto.—Toronto has no power, under an Ontario government statute, to vote more than $500,000 for municipal airports, it was disclosed, putting a crimp in the city's plans to build two airports at a cost of approximately $1,800,000.

Dominion and provincial governments had promised a total of $900,000 towards the scheme, leaving $900,000 for the city to pay.

RUSSIA IS IN THE THROES OF A POLITICAL PURGE

Moscow.—The suicide of the president of the White Russian Soviet republic, hundreds of arrests and the removal of hundreds of thousands from Communist party rolls were announced by the government as the greatest political purge in Soviet Russia's history went forward.

The government said Alexander G. Chervinskoff, 45-year-old head of the westernmost of the Soviet union's 11 republics, killed himself for family reasons. But his death followed closely a denunciation in Communist party meeting, the arrest of 45 of his colleagues for treason and execution of the former commander of the White Russian garrison.

The continued denunciation of thousands of men, including many who have stood near the very top of the state and party organization, gave the Soviet union the appearance of being engaged in a gigantic, nationwide "witch hunt."

Foreign observers still were bewildered by the storm of charges and the scope and ruthlessness of the purge. No foreigner believed most of the charges in full, but agreed they were evidence of chaotic dissension within the Soviet regime and showed that many persons desired, if they were not actually plotting, the downfall of Joseph Stalin.

The latest flood of charges of treason, "wrecking" and "diversion," centring in White Russia, alleged a huge conspiracy against Soviet agriculture.

At Moscow capital of White Russia, N. M. Golodet, president of the White Russian council of commissars, 10 former commissars of the state and numerous members of the state executive committee were arrested.

General I. P. Ubovitch, former commander of the Red army garrison in White Russia, was one of the eight high army officers executed June 12 for a plot to "dismember" the Soviet Union. It was understood the eight were charged with plotting to sever White Russia and the Ukraine from the union and give them to Germany.

At the meeting of the state Communist party at Minsk recently it was charged the collective farms in White Russia were hotbeds of Polish espionage.

Party leaders declared "wreckers" in the commissariats of agriculture and education, with the connivance of M. I. Kalmanovitch, recently removed as all-union commissar for state farms, had brought about destruction of the wheat and crops. It was charged they even persuaded a scientist in the veterinary institute to inoculate blooded livestock with cholera germs.

Chervinskoff was the second suicide of a high Russian official this month. General Jan Gamarnik, former vice-commissar of defence, killed himself June 1. The government said he acted after exposure as a traitor to the nation.

Golodet was removed from office recently, charged with guilty knowledge of a widespread conspiracy, which the government said was "organized by Trotskyist diversionists and wreckers."

SHOULD BUILD UP THE MINERAL CONTENT OF SOIL

Vancouver.—The farmer who doesn't "feed" his land to make its minerals available to growing crops is reducing the food value of his produce and harming national health, Dr. Howell Harris of the University of British Columbia told 20th annual convention sessions of the Canadian Horticultural Association here.

He blamed some cases of rickets, goitre, anaemia, joint ills and sterility from malnutrition to inclusion in diets of foodstuffs from mineral-lacking soils.

The assistant professor of horticulture said "it is of vital concern that our population be fed only the best, not nutrient deficient food and vegetables—and in the final analysis this is a national responsibility of our growers."

He said experiments showed that until soils are "judiciously fertilized" to build up mineral content, especially phosphates, produce grown on them will be deficient in minerals and consequently not the best quality for human consumption.

Similarly, "aerous impairment" in health of livestock has often been traced to widespread mineral deficiency in herbage—a deficiency due almost invariably to incorrect farming practice.

Extent of variations in mineral content under various soil conditions sometimes reaches as much as 450 per cent, he said, quoting analyses of carrots which indicated iron content was 9.0 milligrams per 100 grams in some and only 0.02 in others.

Sugar beets grown on one unfertilized field yielded 13.2 per cent. sugar; but after adequate fertilization increased to 17.3 per cent, he said.

Dr. Harris described research in "starving" plants for individual soil elements on studying them for visible defects in foliage and determining most satisfactory mineral quantity for their growth. Chemical analysis of any individual soil quickly shows what must be added to get best results from the standpoint of nutrient content.

He said deficiency diseases in plants usually are detected by foliage symptoms.

"If growers learn to recognize these symptoms and pay attention to them we will have gone a long way in ensuring our population of a full nutrient-containing, healthful product," he said.

Trade With Brazil

Canada Now Extends Most Favored Tariff Treatment

Ottawa.—Brazil has been accorded most favored nation tariff treatment by Canada under an order-in-council.

Previously goods from the big South American republic entered Canada at the intermediate tariff rates. They will now enter at the lowest tariff rate accorded any foreign country by treaty. Brazil will thus receive the rates prescribed in the trade agreements with France, the United States and Poland.

No change has been made in the tariff rates applicable to Canadian goods entering Brazil. For some time Brazil has accorded Canada the most favored nation treatment in exchange for the Canadian intermediate tariff rates. But with four other South American countries, Uruguay, Argentina, Venezuela and Colombia already on the most favored nation treatment the Canadian government considered it desirable to place Brazil on the same basis.

The change will take effect June 21 and to enjoy the most favored nation rates goods must be shipped direct from a port of Brazil or a port of a country enjoying the British preferential or intermediate tariff direct to a sea, lake or river port of Canada.

The balance of trade between the two countries is heavily in favor of Canada. Canadian exports to Brazil are about four times Brazilian exports to Canada. In 1936 Canada shipped $5,711,000 worth of products to Brazil and bought from that country $900,000 worth. In 1935 the figures were $2,769,000 and $835,846.

Did You Know —

THAT — THE SELKIRK SETTLERS MADE SHAWLS FROM BUFFALO WOOL IN 1822 AND SOLD THEM IN LONDON? — KNITTED GOODS ARE NOW MADE IN 15 WESTERN FACTORIES?

The knitted goods industry in Western Canada had its beginning as early as 1822, when the Lord Selkirk settlers established at Red River the Buffalo Wool Company. Here wool from the buffalo was made into shawls and other articles of wearing apparel, some of which were shipped to England. For a time it prospered, but as is the case with many industries even today, it lacked a market close to home and soon was compelled to close.

From time to time in the early '80's small woollen mills operated in the West and in '85 or thereabouts worsted cloth was produced near Calgary. About the same time a mill in St. Boniface employed about 40 hands.

At the present time there are 15 concerns in the prairie provinces making more than 20 different articles from wool and the industry is at last on a sound footing. Its expansion, of course, depends upon the support received from merchants in its immediate territory, practically no export business being done.

The bride was beautifully dressed in a floor-length dress of white satin, with white silk lace set in sleeves, and carrying a bouquet of roses and carnations. Her veil was held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms and was carried by little Miss Noreen Cole, who looked very nice in a yellow satin dress over point d'esprit with yellow hair ribbon and white slippers. The bride and groom were supported by Miss Ella Rosia, sister of the bride, and Mr. Alex. Kapalka, brother of the groom, also Miss Alice Markousky and Mr. George Barnett. Miss Rosia was nicely gowned in a floor-length dress of pink silk net and carried a bouquet of pink carnations, while Miss Markousky was also nicely gowned in a floor-length dress of pink taffeta and carried a bouquet of gladioli. A large flower basket filled with peonies and gladioli was carried in by Master Lawrence Rosia, brother of the bride, and Miss Lillian Newton, whose dress was of pink satin. Immediately following the ceremony, the bridal party left for Coleman, where a wedding dinner was served at the home of the groom's parents. The happy couple left on Sunday afternoon for a honeymoon to be spent in several U.S.A. and Canada points. For travelling the bride chose an ensemble of yellow and brown, with brown accessories. CHAPTER VII—Continued

As I lay stretching myself on the broad of my back after the cozy sleep of the night, the thought of the schoolmaster came to scatter the fairness of the morning. So, with an old broom on my shoulder and much fear and trembling in my heart, I set out bright and early to make a call on Mr. Michael Hughes, the local schoolmaster. With any ugly, hard job on hand, I have always figured that nothing much is gained by just burning up daylight. The ground was frozen hard.

A few years before, the settlers had got together and put up a log schoolhouse on the townline, a tidy step down from the Marshall farm. One foot-loose itinerant after another had turned his hand to school teaching, and earned a few shillings the quarter for each scholar who trudged down to his classes to get a little learning. But bright shillings being a scarce commodity in Mono, the schoolmaster shifted round weekly from family to family, fetching the cream of local gossip with him, and getting bed and board to eke out the trifling cash that came his way. And, at the table, the housewife usually found that the man of letters was a man of parts. The younger children were somewhat regular in their attendance; but, in the late fall and winter time, big clumsy youths as a rule went also to the local school to learn to write and figure. Many of them had hair showing on the face, and the diseases were common among them for which scratching and sulphur are the principal remedies. They came packed with a loutish devilment that sometimes overtaxed the strength and courage of the schoolmaster. One after another the teachers had been beaten up, and had left for other fields of effort.

In the spring of '12, Michael Hughes had drifted into the township, out of nowhere seemingly, and had tackled the job of teaching the Mono school. His was the tall, lank figure of a man, neither young nor old, but of five and thirty, which is, of course, a mere old age to the mind of any child. His body was as lithe as a gad and as supple as the wind. His features were cleanly chiselled on fine, yet robust lines, and a soft, silk-like beard hid his mouth that was gentle, even to weakness. He thrashed civility under the skin of the big yokels that fall; and so established himself securely as master of the school. Old Hickory Mick earned himself a terrible reputation among the plow boys of Mono as a disciplinarian and wielder of the cane.

The business of boarding around as a nuisance to the farmers' wives did not fit in with his notions of comfortable living; and the master promptly solved the problem by moving into a small log house that had recently been built on a curiously steep bared hard by to the west of the school. There was little household trumpery about, but sufficient for his purpose. The parents of his pupils paid most of the school fees with food and firing. The steepness of his land was such that no plowman has ever turned any of it over. Years after, the little plot was occupied by Jimmie Buchanan, a cobbler who kept bees; but in the master's time it was covered by a scrubby growth and crowned by a gnarled old thorn-tree. Folk called his place Whistling Hill after Knock-na-keadale, in County Down. All the children knew the master was a gentle place, and greatly haunted by the little people. One Halloween night, three separate passers-by saw lights, like tiny fishes, dancing on the hillside below his cabin; and there were soft, piping sounds also heard about the place, like the small, thin whistle a drake gives after ducking himself in a pond.

I found the one door of the schoolmaster's house slightly ajar; and, sticking my head in, I saw the master back as he stooped over the fire-place, cooking his breakfast in a big black, frying pan. With the broom still clutched in my hands, I stole in, quietly sat down on a short log, I kept my mouth tight shut to hold my heart from popping out.

In a moment's time, Old Hickory Mick swung around, holding the long-handled spider aloft. He gave his head a startled jerk in the air as he spied me sitting there. He looked like to eat me all up without a grain of salt.

"You little red-headed son of Belshazzar," he shouted at me, "how dare you set foot in my house without knocking at the door?"

"Oh, sir!" I said, "that's not my name. I'm Paddy Slater, sir; and I've come down," said I, "to look after things at the school, and to rid you of your dirty old cabin, sir."

The man froze me with a hard stare.

"By the hole of my coat!" he exclaimed, after thinking the thing over. "Who gave you instructions to come down here?"

"Oh, sir!" said I, "it was Mrs. Marshall, sir. She said I might stay at her place if I'd rid you of your dirty old cabin, sir."

There was a pause.

"Are you frightened?" the man asked, screwing his mouth up with a wry smile.

"Yes, sir," said I, "I'm scared stiff you will beat me with a stick. But she said I was to rid you of your dirty old cabin, sir. So I just upped and inned."

"Well, Paddy," the man told me after a further pause, "the Greeks had a brave word for a lad who feared a danger, yet strode out to meet it."

"Yes, sir."

"And speaking of words," he thundered at me, "it's a careless little liar you are to call my house a dirty old cabin!"

"It's not an old, dirty cabin, I'll have you know, because it is only recently built."

"Yes, sir."

"And it's not a dirty cabin, I'll have you know, because it is sweet and clean—though perhaps a trifle untidy."

"Yes, sir," said I.

"And it is not a cabin at all, I'll have you know, because it has boards on it."

"Yes, sir," said I.

He shook the pan at me.

"I keep a stick to beat careless little liars with!"

"Yes, sir," said I.

"And I'll have you know, no person comes into my house like an old rooter for swill," he told me, "Get out the door," he ordered me, speaking very stern like, "and come in with your manners on."

"So I upped and outed; and then I knaked good and loud on his door."

"Oh! good morning," said the man to me, "I thought you would have run away."

"Good morning, sir," said I, touching my cap, my name is Paddy Slater, sir. Mrs. Marshall sent me down to do you little services, sir."

"Come in, you unlucky penny," said the master with a little more chuckle, "come in; and, in the absence of anything better at hand, sit yourself down on that short log."

"Very kind of Mrs. Marshall, indeed," said he. "She is a very charming lady, indeed, is Mrs. William Marshall."

"Yes, sir," said I. "I'd die for her," said I.

"And perhaps," he continued, "you might like the price of your trouble for coming down so early in the morning. How would you like a taste of these delectable little trout?" he enquired, poking the pan under my nose.

"Oh! sir," said I, "I am a growing boy."

"Very neatly put," the man remarked.

"So clearing the corner of the table, Mr. Hughes used a sheet of The Globe newspaper as a cover for two plates."

"Ah! ha!" he told me, "you see how we do things among the hills of Mono."

The globe is as round as a ball, yet we dine on the globe. In this bachelor's hall."

"Draw 'till draw 'till!" he urged me, "and salt and pepper to your taste and liking."

It was a case of heel, toe, down they go—heads and all.

"If you dine often with me, Paddy Slater, you will soon become a man of letters," the master informed me, "and to start your education, let me instruct you that such speckled beauties as these were first cooked by Venus with her own hands on the hills of Helicon; whence comes the pretty legend that a mess of them works a love charm."

Michael reddened his pipe in the ashes; and the man blew tidy smoke rings as we sat talking and conversing together. It was heart-lifting to Paddy to be sitting there in the company of the great man without a care or trouble in the world.

On a sudden, the master leapt up. "Let us be off on our way to the school in the name of God!" he exclaimed.

And the master and I then set off to fix the fire at the schoolhouse. He was in fine spirits, but was singing a mournful song:

MY COLLEEN RUE
But dearly and wearily
The snow is drifting by;
And dearly and wearily
It bears my lonely sigh,
Far from my Nigara to roam
To Inny's sparkling wave of blue,
To the homestead in the fairy glen,
And gentle Colleen Rue.

He was a spirited man, and as straight as a candle. To keep up with him, I took grown-up strides beside him, thinking I was now myself quite a man entirely.

It was in this wise that I fell in with Old Hickory Mick, and I served the master faithfully for the next five years. I was the only confidant the solitary man had; and he opened his heart and mind freely to me because he knew I liked him. Yet, to the day we buried him at Centreville, his past remained a mystery so far as I was concerned. My own fancy has always been that Michael Hughes had clean forgotten it himself. Everything in his life story stood out sharp and clear back to a jaunting car ride in Dublin town; but at that point the thread of memory seemed to have broken. The man brought a wealth of learning and personality with him from behind that veil of oblivion; but so far as his personal conscious life back behind was concerned, he knew no more about it than does a babe at its mother's breast. After the fat undertaker gets me, I pray, Father in heaven, that, on my awakening, such loss of memory may be any chance overtake poor, old Paddy Slater. The thought is surely cold comfort to me that my spirit beyond may perhaps have forgotten the poor mortal here below.

Michael Hughes paid me in full the price of all my trouble. The man took many pains to teach me. He may have been an indifferent teacher at times over at the log schoolhouse. The material on which he wrought was often coarse and discouraging. From what I saw of his teaching over there, he did seem at times, however, to have the faculty of arousing the interest and holding the attention of the little children. It is true they got their knowledge in small doses; but there was plenty of pep and dash while he kept them at it. And what he gave them was actually theirs for keeps. At the first sign of listlessness, he promptly bundled the small bodies out to tumble about in the fresh air. In his crude and simple theory, the teacher is wasting his time unless he actually holds the pupils' fixed attention. And, in his opinion, twenty minutes was a long time for a young child or an old man to keep his undivided attention fixed on any one thing. In any event, for the first year, I got my instructions at Whistling Hill and not in the classes at the schoolhouse.

To Create Better Feeling

Breaking Down Of International Prejudices Is A Splendid Thing

America is going English; English is going American. There is a general merging, at least in superficial matters, of two distinct civilizations. It is a splendid thing. In fact from this peculiar phenomenon we may draw a great moral and detect in it the seeds of hope. For such, after all, is the only true internationalism—which must spring from a community of interests and a coincidence of tastes. We understand a fellow who wears clothes like ours and who plays bridge according to the conventions which we observe—we understand him, and he understands us.

We look forward hopefully to a time when this tendency will spread across the world, breaking down even the barriers of language. We look forward to a time when Frenchmen will no longer be "Frogs" to those provincial souls who pass their lives in Suburbs and other London suburbs; a time when Englishmen will not be regarded by the Germans, Swiss, Italians, French and Slavs as wandering duds incapable of saying more than "Yes," "No," "Thank You," and "Good-bye" in any tongue other than their own; a time when Americans will be recognized throughout Europe as civilized and well-informed persons, and Europeans will be recognized as good sports in all America.

We look forward to a time when we shall be able to enoble the globe without attracting hostility or curiosity, and when even cannibal kings will find a welcome in our homeland—Hamilton Spectator.

Astronomers are not like premiers and police chiefs who sometimes have their phones disconnected so they may snatch a little sleep. But the other night Dr. H. Spencer-Jones, British Astronomer General, had to have his telephone removed altogether before he could rest. At a meeting of the board of visitors at Greenwich Observatory he had announced that the moon is moving off its calculated position. It was further off its course, as prescribed by mathematical calculations, than at any time since 1880. When the word got about, half of England wanted Dr. Spencer-Jones' personal assurance something awful was not about to happen. It was explained that the system of mathematics is not sufficiently accurate to calculate exactly the position of the moon in advance. However, it was explained that the astronomers could tell where the moon was going to be 20 years ahead within two seconds, which ought to be good enough.

Arctic Broadcast

May Bring Voice Of Arctic To Canadian Listeners

Feasibility of broadcasting from the Arctic to a national hook-up will be investigated this summer by experts of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation who will accompany the eastern Arctic patrol which sails from Montreal in July on the steamship Naosco. It is not the intention to do public broadcasting from the ship this summer but to try out shortwave communication from different points the ship calls at and canvass the possibility in subsequent years to bring the voice of the Arctic to Canadian listeners.

An American author is said to have written a 50,000-word novel without using the letter "e." We not very hopefully await a volume of Memoirs in which the author makes no use of the letter "I."

HER LIMBS WERE ALMOST CRIPPLED

Suffered With Sciatica For 25 Years

Those who are subject to sciatica should read this letter from one who suffered for years before she found out how to obtain relief.

"For 25 years I suffered from sciatica in my right side, and I had backaches which forced me to remain in bed for two or three weeks at a time. When I got up in the morning, my arms and legs used to pain me almost unbearably. One day I received a letter from Kruschen Salts, I took a bottle of them without feeling much improvement. I tried a second bottle, and that time I felt better. I have kept on taking Kruschen ever since."

(Mrs.) H.L.

The pains of sciatica are frequently caused by an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid. Other ingredients of these salts assist the internal organs to expel the dissolved acid from the system.

Granulation of honey, as many people seem to think, is not an indication of adulteration. Rather, it is a sign of purity. All Canadian honey granulates sooner or later, depending largely upon the proportion of the two invert sugars it contains. The greater the proportion of levulose to dextrose, the longer the honey will remain in liquid form. Levulose, or fruit sugar found in honey, is non-granulating and is the sweetest sugar so far found in nature. It is usually the predominating sugar in honey. Dextrose, or grape sugar, is a rapid granulating sugar, and is predominant in commercial syrups. Granulation of honey is hastened by low temperatures and high temperatures retard it.

Honey sold in glass containers is usually heated when packed, for the purpose of keeping the honey liquid for as long a period as possible. Rapid granulation usually produces a fine texture while slow granulation tends to coarseness. Granulated honey can be brought back to its liquid form by standing the container in water and heating it to 150 degrees Fahrenheit. A higher temperature is likely to darken the colour and drive off aroma and flavour. Further information on honey will be found in bulletin "Honey and Some of the Ways it May be Used" issued from the Publicity and Extension Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Higher Railway Speeds

Stream Lining And Diesel Engines Produce New Fast Records

During the past two or three years railway speeds have been increased in all lands, due particularly to streamlining design and Diesel engines, although some remarkable records, undesigned of a few years ago, have been beaten by steam locomotives.

The announcement that the Broadway Limited between New York and Chicago will, with a new locomotive now being built, travel at a sustained rate of 100 miles per hour, is, in the light of modern progress, surprising. The attempt at such an objective was almost inevitable. The present time for the distance by the Pennsylvania Railroad is 16½ hours, under the proposed schedule this would be about nine hours, the distance being 910 miles.

At present, the German State Railways hold the first half dozen or more long distance speed records with Diesel trains, the best being between Berlin and Hanover, 158 miles, at an average speed of 82.8 miles an hour—Stratford Beacon Herald.

Heavy Flying Boats

Ships Weighing Thirty-Five Tons For Atlantic Air Service

Flying boats weighing approximately 80,000 pounds (about 35½ tons) are being designed for the Atlantic air service, it was learned in London.

The ships, to be built by Short Brothers of Southampton, are expected to be ready for trial flights in 1939. They will have a cruising speed of 180 miles an hour and will be twice the weight of the Caledonia and Cambria, types of flying boat at present being used on Imperial Airways air routes.

The new flying boats will have accommodation for 20 passengers and a small quantity of airmail.

Found It Hard Task

Four explorer-scientists of the Soviet Union plumb the North Pole sea from their ice floe wintering camp and reported by radio to Moscow they found a depth of 14,075 feet. It required three hours of gruelling labor to lower the sounding apparatus and twice that long to pull it up again.

To enable his army to cross the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, the emperor Julian had built a bridge of boats made of skins stretched tightly over oiled frames.
